BIBLE STUDY

Our fall bible study will start again on TUESDAY OCTOBER 22nd at 7pm in the meeting room at St. Joachim's church. We will spend a few weeks finishing our study of Jesus' parables before praying and studying with the accounts surrounding the birth of Jesus in the Gospels just in time for Advent and Christmas. All are welcome!

In the meantime, on TUESDAY SEPTEMBER 24th & TUESDAY OCTOBER 1st at 7pm in St. Joachim's meeting room we will be screening the latest videos from Bishop Robert Barron's Pivotal Players series. The first session is on Bishop Fulton Sheen and the second on the great American writer Flannery O'Connor. We'll be watching a video on each of them in which Bishop Barron explains why they are "pivotal players" in the history of Catholicism and then follow with a brief discussion.

Again, all are welcome to join us!

Reflection from Sister Kathy

For some reason unknown to myself, I recently felt compelled to reread the chapter called "The Grand Inquisitor" from Fyodor Dostoevsky's novel, The Brothers Karamazov. In this chapter, one of the brothers, Ivan, recounts a prose poem in which Christ returns to earth at the height of the Inquisition in sixteenth century Spain. Christ walks through the streets and the people are amazed. But Jesus stops in front of the cathedral where a woman is mourning the death of her seven year old daughter. In compassion, Jesus raises the child from the dead.

At that moment the Grand Inquisitor walks by, takes in the scene and orders Jesus arrested. That night he comes alone to Jesus' cell and lectures Christ on why he cannot allow Jesus to continue his work on earth. He claims that in giving humans free will, Christ has laid upon them an impossible burden. They cannot live under this terrible weight of responsibility, so now the church has come to take away that burden and offer the people security. He claims that the church has chosen to correct Christ's mistake and therefore, Jesus' appearance is unacceptable.

The Grand Inquisitor's argument is long and complicated, but at the same time compelling. His claim that freedom of choice is a serious responsibility that requires a willingness to risk and suffer is borne out in history. To seek freedom from an oppressive ruler, system, moral or religious code requires stamina for a prolonged and often painful process. Whether we think of our own country's determination to break from England, the struggle to end slavery, the fight for workers' rights or the ongoing struggle for equality for women, all have demanded risk-taking and pain.

To return to the story- the Grand Inquisitor claims that Christ insisted on giving us freedom of choice while the devil offered security. I believe that is the issue for us today. Are we content with the relative security that comes to us through unjust systems, or are we willing to risk our time and energy in choosing the vision of equality laid out by Christ? Can we listen to the prophets of our time, however disturbing their message?

Joan Chittister writes that prophecy "has ragged edges. It sets out to deconstruct the present situation. It critiques social structure to which many have given their lives or in which they have status… the ring of real prophecy lies in its uncommon courage."

REFLEXIÓN

"Habrá (...) alegría en el cielo por un solo pecador que se convierta"

Hoy consideramos una de las parábolas más conocidas del Evangelio: la del hijo pródigo, que, advirtiendo la gravedad de la ofensa hecha a su padre, regresa a él y es acogido con enorme alegría. Podemos remontarnos hasta el comienzo del pasaje, para encontrar la ocasión que permite a Jesucristo exponer esta parábola. Sucedía, según nos dice la Escritura, que «todos los publicanos y los pecadores se acercaban a Él para oírle» (Lc 15,1), y esto sorprendía a fariseos y escribas, que murmuraban: «Éste acoge a los pecadores y come con ellos» (Lc 15,2). Les parece que el Señor no debería compartir su tiempo y su amistad con personas de vida poco recta. Se cierran ante quien, lejos de Dios, necesita conversión.

Pero, si la parábola enseña que nadie está perdido para Dios, y anima a todo pecador llenándole de confianza y haciéndole conocer su bondad, encierra también una importante enseñanza para quien, aparentemente, no necesita convertirse: no juzgue que alguien es "malo" ni excluya a nadie, procure actuar en todo momento con la generosidad del padre que acepta a su hijo. El recelo del mayor de los hijos, relatado al final de la parábola, coincide con el escándalo inicial de los fariseos.

En esta parábola no solamente es invitado a la conversión quien patentemente la necesita, sino también quien no cree necesitarla. Sus destinatarios no son solamente los publicanos y pecadores, sino igualmente los fariseos y escribas; no son solamente los que viven de espaldas a Dios, sino quizá nosotros, que hemos recibido tanto de Él y que, sin embargo, nos conformamos con lo que le damos a cambio y no somos generosos en el trato con los otros. Introducidos en el misterio del amor de Dios —nos dice el Concilio Vaticano II— hemos recibido una llamada a entablar una relación personal con Él mismo, a emprender un camino espiritual para pasar del hombre viejo al nuevo hombre perfecto según Cristo.

La conversión que necesitamos podría ser menos llamativa, pero quizá ha de ser más radical y profunda, y más constante y mantenida: Dios nos pide que nos convirtamos al amor.
