MONTHLY DEVOTION

The Holy Rosary

A Note from Fr. John

Naaman the Syrian, in our first reading, and the Samaritan in our Gospel, have two things in common. One is that both suffer from leprosy. The other is that both are foreigners.

Because of their leprosy they were marginalized, cut off from their family and friends and the rest of society. It is a metaphor for sin. Sins harms us, it eats away at our soul as leprosy the body, and at the same time it isolates us from those around us, it necrotizes our relationships. Jesus does not shrink from our leprosy in disgust. He does not keep a safe distance. He who knew no sin, God made him to be sin, so that in him we could become the righteousness of God.

The most natural response to this, to Christ taking upon himself our sins to heal us from them, would be gratitude. But how grateful am I, really, most of the time? Maybe I just take it for granted. Ten lepers were cleansed, but only one returned to Jesus, making everyone stare at him because he was praising God in a loud voice, like some crazy guy. Only one was so grateful, he did not take it for granted. He was a foreigner.

Some of the most zealous Catholics I have met are converts to the faith. Maybe those of us who grew up Catholic tend to take it for granted, and don't fully understand or appreciate what we have. Maybe I would do well to look at my life from another perspective, through the eyes of a foreigner. To be truly grateful for what I have. And if I am really grateful, to desire to share that with others, with everyone in the world. With all the foreigners. "All the ends of the earth have seen the salvation by our God."
