Something from the Pastor

“For where your treasure is, there also will your heart be” (Matthew 6:21). Our Lord taught us this as part of his Sermon on the Mount. Here Jesus warns us about piling up a material treasure that fades, while encouraging us to amass a treasure of God’s love, which is everlasting. We seek after that which will help us fulfill our heart’s desire.

This passage can also be applied to the virtue of studiousness, as witnessed by Saint Thomas Aquinas. Studiousness, associated with temperance, seeks to perfect knowledge. By this virtue we seek to know those things which will lead us to better achieve human flourishing.

Studiousness is a part of temperance and as such keeps us from falling into curiosity, that is, seeking things we do not need to know. Studiousness helps us to focus on goodness and truth, so to stay away from the gossip found on social media. Studiousness also keeps us focused on the purpose of knowledge: perfection of our minds in the truth. Learning is not about gaining power over others or about vain-glory.

As the school year picks begin again, all of us, whether in school or not, ought to cultivate again this virtue. I encourage all of us to study again the teachings of our faith, for they lead to a knowledge of Jesus. Studying the life of Jesus leads us to not just know him but to also imitate him, for Jesus is the way, the truth and the life (cf. John 14:6).

Recall Jesus’ words during the Last Supper, as recorded by Saint John: “This is eternal life, to know you the one true God and Jesus Christ whom you sent” (John 17:3). This is our treasure, and the virtue of studiousness will help us to know Him, to love Him, to serve Him; so, to be happy with Him forever in Heaven.
