From Rev. Michael's Desk

The reading from the Wisdom of Sirach talks about forgiveness and remembrance. I'm sure you are familiar with the saying, "Forgive and forget." But its hard enough to forgive, impossible to forget. Jesus tells us to forgive seventy times seven. That's 490 times, which means to continuously forgive. It's for your own good to forgive lest you give in to bitterness and even the violence of revenge. If you don't forgive you are controlled by the person who offended you: all your actions will be colored by what they did either by holding back or attacking, flight or fight. That is a primitive reaction of the body which involves a complex physiological change which in the long run takes a physical toll: early aging and death, bitterness and loss of friendships, you get the picture.

The solution is to forgive. It doesn't mean you have to have the person over for lunch the next day. You don't even have to greet them if you pass them on the street. It may be that in time the relationship may change. St Jane Frances de Chantal hated the man who killed her husband. It was a hunting accident and her husband, before he died, forgave the man. She could not bring herself to look at him. Eventually she forgave him in her heart and she was able to greet him on the street. Then she invited him to lunch and eventually he asked her to be godmother to his newborn. That was a complete healing and one step on her way to sainthood. She was 28, she loved her husband and had four young children when she was widowed. It was a very, very hard thing to do.

This week we remembered the 25th Anniversary of the attacks on September 11, 2001. An event that changed our lives in many ways. Continued violence and hate in the Middle East which spreads throughout the world. We have to find it in our hearts to forgive, as difficult as it is, and pray for conversion of hearts, from hatred to love, from violence to peace. It's something very, very hard and very very painful but it beats murder, hatred and war. Jesus is the answer.

La lectura del libro de la Sabiduría de Sirácides habla sobre el perdón y el recuerdo. Habrán oído el dicho: "Perdona y olvida". Pero el perdonar es bastante difícil, y olvidar es imposible. Jesús nos dice que perdonemos setenta veces siete que sale a 490 veces, lo que significa perdonar continuamente. Perdonar es por tu propio bien, para no caer en la amargura ni en la violencia de la venganza. Si no perdonas, permites que la persona que te ofendió te controle: todas tus acciones estarán condicionadas por lo que ella hizo, ya sea mediante la inhibición o el ataque, la huida o la lucha. Esa es una reacción primitiva del cuerpo que conlleva cambios fisiológicos complejos; a largo plazo, esto pasa factura físicamente: envejecimiento o muerte prematura, amargura, pérdida de amistades... ya se hacen una idea.

La solución es perdonar. Eso no significa que debas invitar a esa persona a almorzar al día siguiente. Ni siquiera tienes que saludarla si te la cruzas por la calle. Puede que, con el tiempo, la relación cambie. Santa Juana Francisca de Chantal odiaba al hombre que mató a su marido. Fue un accidente de caza y su esposo, antes de morir, perdonó al hombre. Ella no era capaz ni de mirarlo. Con el tiempo, lo perdonó en su corazón y pudo saludarlo por la calle. Más tarde lo invitó a almorzar y, finalmente, él le pidió que fuera la madrina de su hijo recién nacido. Aquello fue una sanación completa y un paso más en su camino hacia la santidad. Ella tenía 28 años, amaba a su marido y tenía cuatro hijos pequeños cuando enviudó. Fue algo sumamente difícil de hacer.

Esta semana conmemoramos el 25.º aniversario de los atentados del 11 de septiembre de 2001. Un acontecimiento que cambió nuestras vidas de muchas maneras. Persisten la violencia y el odio en Oriente Medio, extendiéndose por todo el mundo. Debemos encontrar en nuestros corazones la capacidad de perdonar —por difícil que sea— y rezar por la conversión de los corazones: del odio al amor, de la violencia a la paz. Es algo sumamente difícil y doloroso, pero es preferible al asesinato, al odio y a la guerra. Jesús es la respuesta.

Remembering 9/11

On September 11, we remember with prayer all those who lost their lives on 9/11, their families and loved ones, and the brave first responders who gave so much. May we never forget their sacrifice. May God grant eternal rest to the departed and comfort to all who continue to grieve.

En memoria del 11 de septiembre

El 11 de septiembre recordamos en oración a todas las personas que perdieron la vida en esa fecha, a sus familias y seres queridos, así como a los valientes equipos de primera respuesta que tanto dieron.
